Dr. McMullin Dispels the Myth About Homelessness

Dr. Douglas McMullin is a clinician and Associate Program Director of the Family Medicine Residency program at Shasta Community Health Center. He has developed a curriculum for homeless outreach involving students and residents, and has become an advocate for housing and healthcare for the homeless.

Dr. Douglas McMullin

He shared some of his stories and insights from his experience providing healthcare and other assistance to the homeless residents of Shasta County. His main focus was to emphasize that anyone can become homeless.

Three things he discussed that are frequent causes of homelessness are a lack of a family safety net, financial issues, and disease including mental health and physical health. He also revealed that the average lifespan for a person living on the streets in the USA is 47 years. "If you can provide them a locked door, a bed, a shower, and a fridge you extend their expected life span by 20 years," he said.

He explained that homelessness comes in many forms, and that many of those on the street want to be off the streets. He and his volunteer team have found ways to successfully help get people the medical, financial, and mental help that they need to get back on their feet and to be self-sufficient.

Dr. McMullin's graphic imagery of the real face of homelessness brought home his point that, "This could be your story... anyone can be homeless." His compassion and willingness to help other is commendable.

"This could be your story..."
