Today's Program - Emergent 3D

Michelle Nystrom Introduced our speaker today, Matthew Gile, co-founder of Emergent 3D. Matthew has served in the business and non-profit world on projects and initiatives ranging from serving Syrian refugees as a humanitarian in the Middle East, to managing the FEMA-funded Carr Fire Disaster Case Management Program.

Emergent 3D CEO
Matthew Gile

Emergent 3D was founded by Matthew with his partner, general contractor Don Ajamian, out of a desire to address three problems in the construction industry: 1) Low supply of construction labor, 2) Cost of construction, 3) Cost savings vs. Aesthetic design.

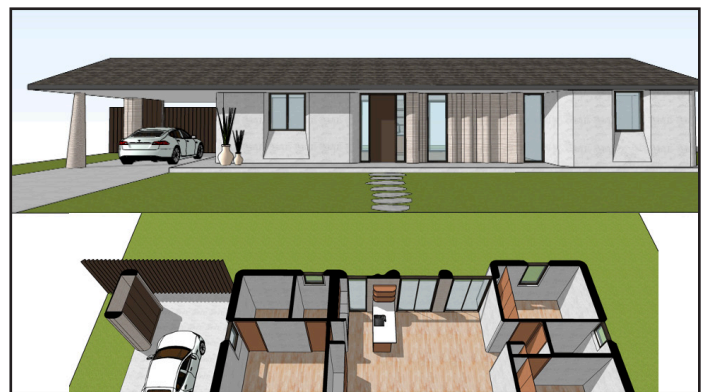

Their construction process uses a 3D concrete “printing” technology to bring a solution to these problems. The industry niche they are hoping to serve includes affordable housing, disaster recovery housing, and homelessness recovery housing.

As of July 2021 they are the first company in California to have plans permitted under the CA 2020 Building Code for a 3D printed home. Another first, their Danish-made 3D printer will be the first of its kind in the United States.

Some interesting take-aways:

- A basic 1,200 square foot house can be constructed in 31.5 hours of “print” time
- Homes will be produced using local materials (sand, aggregate, water, etc.) simplifying supply chain issues.
- Their system has the capacity to build a 3,000 sq ft one-story home or a 6,000 sq ft two-story home.
- Their first home should be completed in the Enterprise Park neighborhood by April of this year.

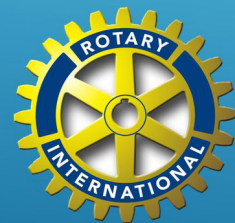

They currently have a project in the works in conjunction with the City of Redding to build 24 affordable housing homes. The following photos are examples of homes that can be produced by their system.
